Lesson 6: Now it's your turn!

Welcome to the last lesson of module 3

Asking questions to the interviewer during a job interview is an important component of showing interest in the position and company. It is also an opportunity for you to gather more information about the role and the company and to demonstrate their knowledge about the industry and organization.

Not only can it provide additional insight into the job responsibilities, culture, and potential for growth within the company, but it also shows the interviewer that you have thoroughly considered the position and are enthusiastic about it.

Additionally, asking questions can establish a dialogue between the candidate and interviewer, allowing them to develop a rapport and potentially learn more about one another.

Overall, asking questions shows that you are engaged and invested in the recruitment process, which can differentiate you from other candidates who may not be as proactive.
